Fifty-three years ago the Class of 1904 produced the first CADUCEUS as a memento for Classicalites and a messenger to the world outside. To find a suitable name for their book they turned to Classical Mythology. Caduceus was the name of the staff borne by Mercury, messenger of the immortal gods. "With it, Virgil says, the god gave sleep and took it away, flew through the sky and performed other remarkable feats."

Now the seniors of 1957 present to you their own CADUCEUS.

A Liberal Education

I am tired of hearing about the sciences and liberal arts as if the sciences were not liberal arts, for they are and always have been. I propose that we speak in the future of a liberal education, which may include some of the physical and biological sciences and mathematics, some history and some study of society, some literature, some study of thought through philosophy, and some of the tools of expression such as language, the visual arts, and music. Such studies provide a person with a body of knowledge, but, more important, they develop his mind: he learns to collect evidence, to reason on the basis of the evidence, to draw conclusions, to express those conclusions in an understandable way, and to put them into effect. He learns, further, about the emotions — their scope, sensitivity, and control. In short, he acquires both understanding and wisdom. The person who thus develops his mind and his emotions is in a position to learn quite quickly any skill for which he is physically qualified and almost any body of information that he is likely to need. There is no better preparation for life than a liberal education, for almost every occupation requires thought and thoughtfulness, wisdom and understanding, tolerance and conviction.

Science in a Liberal Arts Education

The objectives of a liberal education are the objectives of a lifetime. It is a course of study that should be encouraged in all the high schools of America, both for those who are planning post-secondary education as well as for those who plan to enter the various occupations in which they may be interested. The position of the United States Government in the world of affairs today demands the development of a citizenry that is liberal in its thoughts and actions. The more one knows about self, about others, about the scientific world, about his own society and its relationship to the cultures of other people, and last, but not least, his understanding of religion and man's relationship to his God, the more is man able to enjoy what Jefferson wished for every American when he said "the pursuit of happiness."

Today we are living in a highly scientific age — the age of the atom. If we are to accept the objectives of a liberal education as those that free man from the chains of ignorance and misunderstanding, it is imperative that we include in the curriculum those scientific studies that enable him to observe that the development of science is a medium through which the life of man is enriched. To deny young Americans the pursuit of scientific study in a liberal education would be to deny them the opportunity to develop the liberal thinking that is essential to American citizens.

I believe that the freedom, the hopes, and the objectives of a liberal education, of which science must be an integral part is expressed in the poem, "High Flight" by John Gillespie Magee, Jr.

"Oh, I have slipped the surly bonds of earth,
And danced the skies on laughter-silvered wings;
Sunward I've climbed and joined the tumbling mirth
Of sun-split clouds — and done a hundred things
You have not dreamed of — wheeled and soared and swung
High in the sunlit silence. Hov'ring there,
I've chased the shouting wind along and flung
My eager craft through footless halls of air.
Up, up the long delirious, burning blue
I've topped the wind-swept height with easy grace,
Where never lark, or even eagle flew;
And, while with silent, lifting mind I've trod
The high untrespassed sanctity of space
Put out my hand, and touched the face of God.

CLASSICAL HIGH SCHOOL

There is much controversy as to the exact year Classical was founded. Some claim 1843, but that was merely the year in which the original Providence High School was founded. It was not until 1855 that a Classical department was established there. Classical became a "school in itself" in 1897 by moving into its present building. The school has not changed much since then, except for the original gyms which are now cafeterias, and the lecture hall which is now the Guidance Office. In this long span of time, Classical has had but three principals, Dr. William T. Peck (1881-1931), Mr. Charles E. Paine (1931-1943), and Mr. James F. O'Neil, our present principal.

Our Class Officers

Hard are the lives of freshmen we were told,
but we were merry and we were bold.

"Is our purpose at Classical to seek wisdom?" we asked the answer affirmative — we bent to our task.

Soon our class discovered studies weren't all;
the frolic, therefore hop, prom, and ball.

Though the sweaters of some had more than one stripe;
the class on the whole was not the athletic type.

"One for all and all for one," we forty stood united;
friendliness pervaded, no one was ever slighted.

Rules were there to follow; teachers there to guide;
of the life at Classical High, we saw every side.

Years stretch out before us, what will our future be?
to the doorway of success, Classical offered the key.

Cum Laude

Miss Wetherell and Miss Slocum award Cum Laude pins.

The Cum Laude Society was founded fifty-one years ago by Dr. Abraham W. Harris, head-master of a private school for boys in Port Deposit, Maryland. The objective of the society is to reward scholarship. Classical High School's Chapter, established in 1921, has the distinction of being the first in any public school of America. To be eligible for the coveted honor of membership, a student must be in the top twenty per cent of the graduating class. Outstanding character, in addition to scholastic ability, is necessary for membership.

Mr. James F. O'Neil, our principal, is the President of Classical's chapter, while Miss Charlotte A. Wetherell is Secretary, and Mr. A. Forest Ranger serves as Treasurer. The Executive Committee consists of Mr. Charles J. McMillan, Mr. A. Forest Ranger, and Miss Dorothy Slocum.

Miss Dorothy Slocum

We, the members of the Class of January, 1957, wish to express our thanks and appreciation to MISS DOROTHY SLOCUM for her sincere and helpful guidance during our senior year at Classical.

Our Class Officers

The history of the Class of 1957 reveals not merely a succession of noteworthy events but rather warm personal experiences. In retrospect the freshman year will always be remembered as one of utter bewilderment, of amazement at the amount of homework and at the antiquity of the building, of awe at the aurora of intellectualism surrounding upperclassmen.

The Sophomore year was the year of awakening. Adopted into the ranks of loyal sons and daughters of Classical, we began to support our teams, to undertake social ventures like the inevitable splash parties and our own "Shamrock Shananigans". Johnny Rampone wielded the gavel as president, while on the playing fields our athletes laid the foundations for future fame.

In the junior year we began to assert ourselves. Some were elected to offices of responsibility; others like Charlie Farrell and Carolyn Aust prospered in J. A. circles. Pete McCabe was class president, and we presented the "Lollipop Hop" and the socially elegant Junior Prom. Our scholars established their reputations, with Dave Bender being awarded the Harvard Book as the outstanding junior.

During the senior year we ascended to the heights of achievement. Chuck Ashworth directed the "Caduceus", Ed Iannuccilli ruled as chief executive of the class. Our students were swarmed under with awards, the most notable of which was the qualification by four of our colleagues for the National Merit Scholarships. Diane Davies and Avis Cohen emerged as our "super girls". But with the climax of the year, graduation, the history of the class of 1957 was given its final master stroke.

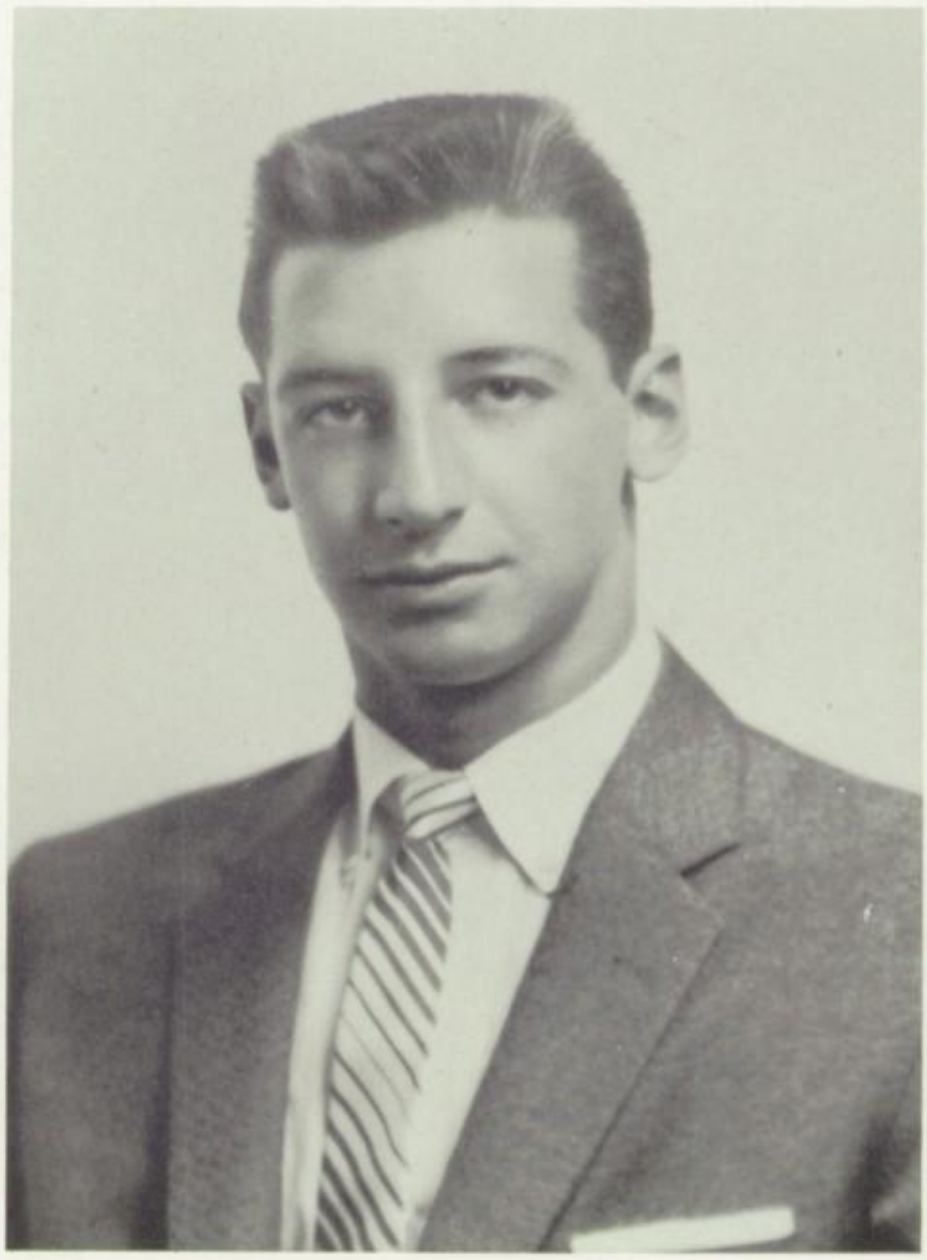
Sagacious, and endowed with poise is the charming and softspoken Senior "Miss Caduceus". Her hobbies include collecting records and bicycling — loves to sail and has won an "Admiral" — tennis, swimming, skating are her favorite sports — Red Sox fan — cheer leader and sports a major letter — voted "Best Natured", "Ideal Classicalite" — in her spare time Avis cashiers in a super market, plays piano, teaches Sunday School, has pen pals in France and British East Africa — Simmons College will have her studying dietetics in September.

MR. CADUCEUS

DANIEL VICCIONE

Good natured, reliable is the Senior "Mr. Caduceus". Danny has proven his ability on the gridiron — member of the Journal-Bulletin "All Class B" football second team — participated in basketball, indoor and outdoor track — managed an excellent scholastic record — found time to be active in the Junior Alliance Francaise, Hi-Y, vice-president of the Athletic Council — voted "Best Natured", "Most Versatile", "Ideal Classicalite". He has hopes of entering West Point having been nominated third alternate to the U. S. Military Academy.



How World War III Would Differ from World War II

Charles Joseph Ashworth, Jr.

The tense situation in the world today is quite similar to the international picture shortly before the United States entered World War II. The rebellion of Hungary, the riots of Poznan, and the Arab-Israeli conflict could all have ignited a third world war in much the same manner as Hitler's disregard for the Munich Pact and the Japanese invasion of Pearl Harbor had started World War II on its global course of destruction, grief, and terror. If a third global conflict should arise, it would be for much the same reasons as World War II, namely an act of aggression, a desire for world enslavement, or the disregard of a major treaty or document.

The military contributions of World War II were great. The German "Wehrmact" introduced the "blitzkrieg" form of attack, and demonstrated with utmost success the use of tank divisions to support movements of the German infantry. Both Japan and Germany developed air power for land and sea operations to a high degree. The Allied contributions to tactics on land and sea were also great. But in a third world war these tactics for the most part would be useless because of the major advances of science. The snorkel submarine is but a toy beside the "Nautilus"; while a B-29 is but a minature beside a B-52. The advent of intercontinental guided missiles and rockets would make the third world war a thing unsurpassed in horror and in ruin.

With the use of the present-day weapons, there is no doubt that war strategy can be executed to a much higher degree of success. Had the German Navy possessed a "Nautilus", the Battle of Britain might have been won. If an atomic bomb had been dropped on Pearl Harbor, that great nerve center of the United States Pacific Fleet might have been lost forever. The destruction rendered by weapons today would not cripple an industry, air base, or metropolis; it would undoubtedly destroy it. A mass hysteria would reign over peoples of the world, a mass hysteria of fear, fear with no hope. The strife ultimately evolved from a third world war would surpass the terror and ruin of anything ever before witnessed by man.

The decision and consequences of such a struggle would be decisive. There would be no partial victor or partial vanquished. The wake of a third world war would leave the world entirely free or entirely enslaved. As always in history, "To the victor belong the spoils." After World War I the vanquished recovered to become a major military power within but fifteen years. After World War II the vanquished became an expanding and progressive nation within ten years. After a third world war the vanquished would never recover.

The third world war has only one major aspect. It would undoubtedly mark the first time in history when America would suffer the terror of bombs raining upon her cities and the horror of witnessing her citizens die in their own homes, at the hands of a fanatical foreign power. This is an event which has been common in the histories of other nations, but something that God has spared America.

Steven Thomas Holzinger

No Man Is An Island

An island is a place alone, separated from its group. It is cold and inhospitable toward visitors. No man can be so utterly alone, so completely set apart, for man, by nature, is a social creature. He has built towering cities and giant ships; he has conquered the world and now reaches for the stars. Where one man goes, others always follow; there is ever a Columbus among men to discover new thoughts and ideas, and there are always those who are ready to follow him.

Many people appear to be gruff and ill-tempered; they seem not to fit into man's social pattern — but this pretense is only a thin shell, a veneer of disapproval of the habits and mores of his fellow creatures. Was there ever a man so absolutely alone and so totally independent, that he did not, in time of great tribulation call upon God, or pray for the understanding of his loved ones?

Everyone forms ties in life, whether or not he tries to avoid them. As a boy, he makes close friends among his playmates; as a young man in school, he makes acquaintances that last a lifetime; as a grown person, he forges the strongest links in the chains that tie him to his fellowman — he marries and rears children, who are a part of him, a living picture which continually reminds him that he is not alone, not forsaken by humanity.

Even that unusual and exceptional person who does not form close ties, usually has made an unbreakable bond, a bond we recognize as religion, for religion is a bridge, a method of bringing man closer, ever closer to God. There is a part of God in every one of us; all we human beings have souls and consciences. "No man is an island" because no man is utterly independent of his fellow or completely separated from God.

Peroratio

Man is a complex being; consequently his education is also complex. A liberal education is nothing less than the complete education of complex man. A complete education does not necessarily produce an omniscient man, but only one whose range of knowledge is as complete as possible. A person educated in the liberal arts knows not just one subject completely, but many subjects . . . completely if possible.

But what is a liberal education? The name itself implies a broad range of studies, but precisely a liberal education includes both the humanities and the sciences. The reason it is a liberal education is that it contains two different courses of study, both essential to the existence of modern man.

A truly liberally educated man never becomes an "intellectual who is proud that he knows no chemistry" or a technician who holds contempt for poetry." He might eventually become either the intellectual or the technician, but he will always see the purpose and necessity of the other because he is acquainted with it and understands it.

Here we have the crux of the problem. Man is continually condemning that with which he is not acquainted. World crises arise from man's inability to understand his fellow man. A liberal education reveals man to himself, his origin . . . and perhaps his destination. It is the art of communication and discovery without which there can be no understanding or existence. If complex man is to continue living in complex society, a liberal education, the arts and the sciences, is not only desirable, it is imperative.

Pro Arte . . .

"Understanding is the well spring of life unto him that hath it" — Proverbs 16:22

Study of the arts is being neglected. Perhaps nothing contributes more to the advancement of our culture than knowledge of a liberal nature. The study of the humanities enables us to participate intelligently in the affairs of the world and does not limit us to a single field of endeavor. The mind of man must have a knowledge of the arts to make the utmost of its capacity. The arts are creations of the most brilliant minds in our civilization. Can we then afford to neglect them?

To support this argument let us consider some of the advantages of a study of the arts. We look first to the Biblical passage which prefaces this essay. Understanding is the word that stands out. We can not, as intelligent people, fail to realize that understanding involves a knowledge of all phases of life and a knowledge of arts which give a fuller appreciation of life. A knowledge of this nature certainly can be interpreted as implying nothing but a thorough and complete grasping of all ideas possible in our short lives. The study of the humanities should be all encompassing. First, it should and must include a study of philosophy, philosophy of life, morals, and eventual destination. Second, these studies should comprise a very complete knowledge of all literature, which relates the story of mankind. The natural sciences must not be omitted, for through the study of biology and chemistry we obtain more information pertinent to our world. Ancient and modern languages should be learned to give our minds that well-rounded education which is so desirable. With the accumulation of many years of this knowledge in our minds we can then choose a field which we know will complement our intelligence. In this way, the highest and fullest limit of the mind is attained. To close let us reexamine the words of a great champion of the arts:

> "At haec studia adulescentiam alunt; senectutem oblectant, secundas res ornant, adversis perfugium ac solacium praebent, delectant domi, non impediunt foris, pernoctant, nobiscum peregrenantur, rusticantur."
> Cicero 'Pro Archia'

—DUNCAN SMITH

. . . Pro Scientia

De-emphasis of "pure" science and accentuation of the humanities are rapidly becoming the keynotes of progressive educational concepts. To counteract dispositions toward blind concentration in a particular field of science, educators have inaugurated comprehensive programs introducing the humanities into technical courses of study. In the frenzied haste to conform to such philosophies, the dedicated man of science, the contemporary Gallileo, is just as rapidly assuming the character of a heinous figure whose fanatical devotion to abstruse formulae and utter disregard of moral values imperil the human race. He is further epitomized as one whose alleged cynicism can be reconciled with humanitarianism only by a thorough dosing of the arts.

Such allegations are deceptive. Equally misleading is the supposition that a mere study of the humanities lends a consummate appreciation of mankind. Human values are basically inherent in one's moral fibre and are not acquired through so perfunctory a means as learning from books. To be sure a study of the humanities does effect a refinement of one's moral concepts, but this is superfluous in the case of the "pure" scientist who maintains a minimum of social contacts.

Science in itself may be considered one of the humanities, for it, too, represents a form of philosophy. Since man is subject to his environment, nature wields a decisive influence over a social order, and hence an indirect link is forged between the realm of the pure scientist and humanity. As he wanders further into his specialized field he comes commensurately closer to God, and develops therewith an almost intimate kinship with his Creator.

In the furor created by this controversy, the pure scientist must not lose sight of his primary objective: namely, to delve into the realm of the inscrutable, to formulate theories on scientific processes, and subsequently to substantiate his hypotheses with proof. Such a consuming task demands the ultimate in concentrated effort, and, therefore, the dedicated man of science must divorce himself from all extraneous matter. To impede him with a cumbersome accumulation of facts irrelevant to his chosen calling would be to forsake the efficiency of the man; to impose a strict regimentation of thought upon a naturally free and inquisitive intellect would be to violate the man himself. The task of maintaining a link between man and science must be relegated to the less dedicated; to the pure scientist must be entrusted the charge of transcending the frontiers of science.

The ideal of pure science must be preserved, for its fate will decide whether humanity will wallow in the doldrums of mediocrity or whether it will ascend to new summits of achievement.

—WILLIAM P. McCABE

Exordium

Education is a process with which man comes in contact continually. As man has no direct control over his involuntary or informal education, he should be primarily concerned with the content of his voluntary or formal education. Once, the field of the educated man was limited to the humanities. But man has discovered a new horizon . . . science. The rivalry has begun.

Man is no longer the uncomplicated, unburdened individual of yesterday. He sees the world treading on a new era of scientific research. His curiosity, his desire to aid his fellow man, his passion for self-preservation . . . these instincts are all awakened within him. Yet behind him are the great traditions of the humanities, which, he was taught, were the basis of the educated man. The complexity of his world has forced man into this corner, to choose between the search for self-preservation through science and the search for the beauty and richness of humanistic studies.

In an age of anxiety, when men discover new methods of arming themselves to prevent war and in an age when, one by one, the far reaching tentacles of the monster disease are being removed, the scientist rightfully claims his place as an essential figure in the education of man. Yet the man of letters brings forth the age old concept that "man cannot live by bread alone" and contends that he, too, is necessary.

The student is forced to make a choice. He is torn between a desire to seek beauty and human understanding and a natural instinct of self-preservation. Which shall he choose?

—CORRINE A. HEDITSIAN

The Modern Man

There is no conflict between the sciences and the arts. It happens that our society today is a technological and practical one, and science has provided us with the benefits of this technology. We Americans admire and respect the men who have given us the things that are so useful to us. The scientist who gives us new and better cars, planes, and television sets is recognized, appreciated, and valued.

Yet, while the success of a society is generally measured by the products of science, there is another and indispensable part of our life; this part is culture. The painters, the poets, the teachers, and the philosophers have provided us with the culture that is an essential of our life. The value of what these men produce cannot be measured in horsepower or even in dollars and cents; their contribution to life is not a material one. What they give us is, however, of immense value; it is food for the mind and the soul of the human being.

Both the artist and the scientist are a necessary part of our life. Obviously, we cannot have culture without civilization; likewise, civilization without culture is also impossible. If, by chance, we had a civilization without culture, a man would be only half a man. He would be, in effect, dehumanized; he would lack the moral and the ethical sense that distinguishes man from all other species. We are fortunate in having the opportunity to live in a world in which civilization and culture complement each other. In a recent advertisement in Time the point was made that civilization must work with culture: "The finds of nuclear exploration must be employed not in the service of a scientific, or economic, or political provincialism but wherever they are needful to the physical, mental, and moral rehabilitation of men and of societies."

There is, therefore, no conflict between the sciences and the arts. One benefits man materially and the other benefits him spiritually, and both combine to make the completeness of man.

David Bender
Editor

Avis Cohen, Jack Lafferty, and David Bender develop a new idea.

The official news medium of the school and organ of student expression is the "Classical Review." Boasting a fresh, unbiased editorial policy and a deep-rooted reputation for meticulous reporting, this newspaper publishes bi-monthly editions filled with "all the news that's fit to print" and then some.

The main attraction of the "Review" is the variety of its content. For the rugged outdoor type there is an extensive sports section; to the girls may appeal the affable "chatter" columns; and for the intellectual there is a thought-provoking editorial section.

The task of harmonizing the business and literary interests of the "Review" has been committed to Editor David Bender. Overseers in the venture are Miss Bernice Sears and Mr. Walter Andersen.

Forum Club

"All authority belongs to the people."

—Jefferson

Current events and political and social problems are the topics for the lively discussions of the Forum Club. The members, juniors and seniors, present their opinions on the various subjects which arise during the panel discussions. Some members of this club represent Classical at such gatherings as the Model Legislature, the Model Congress, and the Model United Nations at Harvard. The club is advised by Miss Kathleen V. Boyd.

World affairs get careful scrutiny by Gerald McOsker, Joseph Brenkle, Corinne Heditsian, Jenifer Brown, and William McCabe.

Forum Club members, Betty Ladd, Joseph Brenckle, David Smith, and Stephanie Glass, investigate material for future discussion.

Debating Society

"Liberty and union, now and forever, one and inseparable!"

—Webster

Development of proficiency in the age old art of public speaking and debating is the purpose of the Debating Society. Membership in this club is open to all students, and the club gives its members a full program of interclub debates, with ample opportunity for each member to perfect his rhetorical skills. The subjects discussed vary greatly, but everyone agrees that practice in argument for argument's sake can be fun and profitable as well. The adviser to the society is Mr. Paul F. Gleeson.

A. Larson proves his point to other members of the Debating Society, C. Davis, J. Kirshenbaum, C. Jennings. (Seated) N. Waxler, Treas., J. Brenkle, Club Council representative, C. Heditsian, Sec'y., (Standing) G. Nivica, Pres., R. Bojar, V. Pres. are doing research for the next meeting of the Debating Society.

Miss Charlotte Wetherell
Director

"Parlez-vous francais?"

David Smith corrects his French translation as Miss Wetherell points out his errors.

Junior Alliance Francaise

The purpose of the Junior Alliance Francaise is to further the knowledge of French culture, history and art, and to make the French language better known in the community. Sponsored by the Senior Alliance Francaise of Providence, it was originated eleven years ago by Mrs. Charles A. Post, President of the Senior Alliance. Students who have completed at least one year of French are eligible for membership. At present, there are eleven schools from the Providence vicinity represented at the meetings. The officers of the Jr. Alliance are the same as those serving on the Board of the Sr. Alliance. However, each school has a student and teacher representative to the Student Council and the Teachers Council respectively; student representatives from Classical this year were Nanci Noon and William Isé, and the teacher representative was Miss Wetherell. Usually, five meetings are held each season.

At the various meetings throught the year, under the direction of Mrs. Valentine Pinacoli, the Jr. Alliance has planned many fascinating and informative activities for its members. For instance, at one meeting the students sang popular French songs, and, at another, enjoyed a movie starring Maurice Chevalier. At a later gathering, they heard Miss Wodehouse of the Rhode Island School of Design Museum discuss French art and painters. Then, to improve their speaking, they tried to describe the works of art themselves. In a friendly contest among the schools, which tested the speaking powers of these students, Classical was the winner. By all these activities, the members of the Jr. Alliance feel that they have broadened their understanding of life in "la belle" France.

Every year, there are prizes to the boys and girls who have benefited the most from the program of the Jr. Alliance. In the spring, two awards are offered to the most deserving students; one is a day's trip to New York for the annual meeting of the Sr. Alliance Francaise; the other is a summer's journey to France to live with a French family. Again, the Jr. Alliance Francaise furthers the knowledge of French culture to those who are interested.

FRENCH CLUB

FIRST ROW: A. Pellini (Treas.), N. Noon (Sec'y), M. Drugan (Vice-Pres.), Miss Wetherell (Adviser), A. Cohen (Pres.), C. Mondshein, C. Bernier.

SECOND ROW: G. Nivica, J. Halpern, J. Kolb, B. Ladd, K. Doob, S. Savin, N. Mallard, A. Berriman, J. Goldman.

French Club

The French Club, supervised by Miss Charlotte A. Wetherell, not only helps second and third year French students to speak this language more fluently, but also affords a period of relaxation on alternate Thursday afternoons. The meetings which are conducted by the officers, Diane Davies, Avis Cohen, and Al Pellini, include many interesting things. Outside speakers, a French newspaper published by the students, and an annual Christmas party add spice to the year's activities.

Popular songs get French rendition from the French Club singers.

Miss Wetherell comments on a letter from Avis Cohen's French pen pal.

GERMAN CLUB

German Club

Judy Darling reads the minutes to the German Club.

A liking for good fellowship and a desire to put German to practical use are pre-requisites for membership in the German Club, an organization intent on introducing the student to Teutonic culture. The club fosters a strong reputation for versatility, for it engages quite actively in the publication of a newspaper and in the presentation of plays and skits.

NINTH ROW: H. Annotti, H. Owen, R. Locke, W. Morrissey, J. Urquhart, R. Petitpas.

Science Club

Intellectual curiosity in scientific fields prompts many members to join the Science Club. Under the direction of Mr. John F. Lafferty, the club members take trips to see science in action and perform experiments of their own. These students help Classical maintain a good representation at the annual Science Fair and quite often receive many awards at this event.

D. Davies, C. Bernier, J. Lafferty, and K. Blackman are doing experiments with sound.

K. Doob, S. Savin, and S. Holzinger are testing an electron tube.

Mr. McCabe leads the Band

Band

Music is salve for the troubled mind, and, recognizing this fact, Mr. Edward McCabe and his "Classical five plus twenty" make it their pleasant business to sooth the frayed nerves of the student body with relaxing — and sometimes not so relaxing — band music. Judging from an enthusiastic response, the renditions of these protegés of John Philip Souza have become an integral part of all school assemblies.

Mr. Edward McCabe
Director of Band and Glee Club

Glee Club

The soft strains of music emanating from the assembly hall during the course of the day may be traced to the practice sessions of the Classical Glee Club, an assemblege of girls whose propensities toward music are given an outlet in the form of rythmic singing. The group, under the direction of Mr. Edward McCabe, has established itself as one of the principle features at graduation and at Christmas assemblies.

Mr. McCabe leads the Glee Club in a chorus of "Ave Maria."

FOURTH ROW: R. Murphy, R. Kramer, I. Charken, D. Conti.

A Cappella Choir

An inovation in Classical's music program has been the formation of an A Cappella Choir, a group of students bent on expounding the beauty of unaccompanied group singing. The choir's repertoire of choral arrangements, ranging from haunting European ballads to the colorful folk songs of our own deep South, lend a highly entertaining atmosphere to all its performances.

Dr. Pichierri leads the A Cappella Choir at a school assembly.

THIRD ROW: L. Kassed, U. Calise, C. Bernier, A. Galloway, B. Iafrati, S. Hershey, J. Darling, S. Seiden, E. Fessel, A. Scacciotti, C. Heditsian, K. Doob.

Y-Teen

This group, an organization affiliated with the Y. W. C. A., is composed of girls whose main purpose is to have fun while helping others. These girls often visit orphans' homes and provide gifts, cookies, and games for the children there. The Y-Teens also give fashion shows and Christmas pageants. Highlight of the year is the annual Pajama Party. The Classical organization is led by Miss Mary McCauley.

B. Hand, B. Cambio, R. Del Sesto, E. Iannucilli, B. De Biasio, L. Merlino, officers of Hi-Y plan for the next meeting.

Hi-Y

Twenty-five boys make up the Hi-Y Club of Classical. The advisers, Mr. Max H. Flaxman of the faculty, and Mr. Roy Hawthorne of the Y.M.C.A., co-operate with the officers in directing the club's affairs. This year the officers were Bruce Cambio, Edward Iannucilli, Bernard Hand, Lawrence Merlino, and Robert Di Biasio.

Traffic Squad

Mr. Murchelano's militia, the Traffic Squad, faces the onrush of students going to and from classes. It is the duty of the members of the squad to keep up-stairs up and down-stairs down, and to preserve some semblance of order in the crowded halls of Classical.

TRAFFIC SQUAD

FIRST ROW: M. Hassenfeld, Mr. Murchelano (Adviser), D. Bender.
SECOND ROW: C. Farrell, D. Smith.
THIRD ROW: J. Pezzullo, J. Lafferty.

SEVENTH ROW: R. Tougas, R. Sala.
EIGHTH ROW: R. Place, R. Halpern, W. McCabe, A. Torgan, J. Peisach, L. Merlino.

Library Assistants

In order to keep the Classical Library in its perpetually methodical order, a few students devote some of their time in aiding Miss Spizzirri, our Classical librarian. The running of the library is a great task, but Miss Spizzirri and her capable assistants accomplish this very efficiently.

These students are doing research in our school library.

GUIDANCE ROOM
MESSENGERS

FIRST ROW: J. DeCristofaro, J. DeFalco, M. Collins, J. Darling, Mr. Flaxman, A. Scacciotti, L. Greenberg, P. Seltzer, M. Davies, L. Goldberg.
SECOND ROW: B. Goldberg, N. LaMothe, B. Greenberg.

Messengers, Judy Halpern and Joan Greenstein, await their next mission from Miss Hoye and Miss Pontarelli.

Messengers

That the news get through is the primary concern of the messenger, a stout corps of fleet-footed girls who, in the best traditions of Mercury, keep Classical's antiquated but nonetheless dependable communication system functioning. Miss Margaret M. Hoye of the office staff, in her capacity as supervisor, maintains a watchful eye on her charges.

Club Council

Tact and diplomacy are the watchwords of the policy-setting Club Council, an exclusive organization which keeps Classical's social calender free from conflict. The need to set the date for all social functions develops among the members a respect for the fine art of compromise.

Athletic Council

To the Athletic Council is entrusted the charge of guiding the Purple's sports program. Assisted by its faculty adviser, Athletic Director Angus L. Thompson, this august body of Herculean youths doles out impartial and irrevocable justice on questions of eligibility for letter awards.

RECENT HONORS AND AWARDS

Classical is Honored by Brown University

The Brown Club Award is presented by Joseph Olney (right), president, to James F. O'Neil, principal of Classical High School. Between them is Emery R. Walker, Jr., Dean of Admissions at Brown University. This was the fourth annual presentation of the award, which is for excellence in college preparation, based on the academic average of three or more Brown freshmen. This year's award was won by Classical, represented by nineteen graduates in the Brown freshmen class.

The INCE TROPHY was won by the Classical High School Chemistry Team in the annual chemistry contest at the University of Rhode Island.

Carol Caroselli and Clark Coolidge were among the five representatives from Rhode Island to the New England Science Fair.

Miss Bernice Sears was honored by the Scholastic Press for her efficiency as a newspaper adviser for the past twenty years.

Miss Cynthia Sahagian of the class of 1956 was the first Classicalite to win the Merit Scholarship.

The CADUCEUS was awarded a First Place rating by the National Scholastic Press Association at the University of Minnesota.

For the second consecutive year, the Columbia Scholastic Press Association has bestowed upon the CADUCEUS its highest honor, a Medalist Award.

The CADUCEUS Collectors' Trophy, is awarded to the first room having one hundred percent paid subscription to the year book. This year the trophy was presented to Patricia McCaffrey of Room 21.

The Classical Review Trophy is presented each year to the home room having the largest percent of review sales for its number of students. The winners for 1955-1956 were Mary Fricker and Corinne Heditsian of Room 12.

SCHOOL CALENDAR–FIRST SEMESTER

Mr. Morro introduces first string football squad at school assembly.

NOVEMBER

The 11A class sponsors the highly successful "Turkey Trot." Eight students qualify for the National Merit Scholarships. January Class distributes twenty superlatives to nine students. Cross Country squad ends a highly successful season. Our endeavoring Football Team concludes the season with a 3-5 record.

DECEMBER

The greatest event of the winter social season, the Christmas Ball, is held at the Plantations Club. The fifth annual Varsity Club Banquet is held at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel. Seven Seniors are elected to Cum Laude.

Jane Bianchi is crowned queen of the Caduceus Dance by Mr. Andersen. Other candidates, D. Davies and J. Scalzi, look on.

SEPTEMBER

Classical opens for the 114th year. Emery Walker, Dean of Admissions at Brown University, speaks at the first assembly of the year.

OCTOBER

CADUCEUS Board has its first meeting of the year. The Columbia Scholastic Press Association awards a Medalist to the 1956 CADUCEUS. "CADUCEUS Carnival" ushers in the social season.

Barbara Chernov receives her diploma at graduation.

JANUARY

The essays of Stephen Holzinger and Charles Ashworth are selected as Anthony Medal winners. The Cum Laude Society initiates seven outstanding scholars of the January Class. Graduation exercises are held for thirty-six students in the auditorium of Central High School. Students welcome mid-term vacation after a gruelling period of examinations.

SCHOOL CALENDAR–SECOND SEMESTER

FEBRUARY

Basketball team completes its season. Athletic Council Dance is a complete success. The memorable fire damages the building, and Classical's ceilings are stripped of their plaster.

MARCH

Caduceus goes to press. Baseball practice begins. Track team starts the outdoor season.

Mr. Kramer speaks at Cum Laude Tea.

Teachers from foreign countries visit Classical.

Students line up outside school for fire drill.

APRIL

Golf team begins competition. Long-awaited spring vacation arrives.

MAY

Baseball team enjoys a successful season. Freshmen enjoy their first social event, the "Freshman Frolic." Seniors enjoy their last social event, the "Senior Prom."

JUNE

Final exams burden students with excessive study. Juniors sample their first formal, the "Junior Prom." A few lucky students experience the Cum Laude Society initiation. Graduation finally arrives as Seniors sadly leave Classical. School finally closes.

Layout committee, J. Samdperil, M. Dimond, and R. Leven, do last minute work on Caduceus before it goes to press.

Mr. Jackson records the results as Don Conti mixes two liquids over the Bunsen burner.

COACHES

FRANK BELLINO

The success of the school's baseball teams may be attributed to the shrewd and versatile Frank R. Bellino, who supplements his duties as baseball coach with those of assistant football and basketball mentor.

WALTER BERNARD

The sagacity, tact, and patience exhibited by Walter Bernard while compiling his nearly unblemished record as tennis overseer exemplify the best qualities of a tennis coach.

EDWARD BOGDA

A professed advocate of physical fitness in all aspects of life, Edward A. Bogda has extended his precepts to the realm of cross country with enlightening results, as evidenced by his season's record.

JEROME FISHER

Jerome L. Fisher's acquisition of the coaching reins of the golf team has been distinguished by a marked revival of interest in golf and by encouraging successes in competition.

BROWN CLUB AWARD

The Brown Club of Rhode Island formally recognized the accomplishments of Classical's 1956 Class B championship track team by awarding it a plaque emblematic of the title. At exercises in front of Brown's Marvel Gym earlier this year, former Co-captains Bill Simmons and Gus Scannapieco (l-r) accepted the award on behalf of the school.

The 1956 track and field contingent, maintaining a complete mastery over all Class B opposition, powered its way to the title and placed high in state-wide competition. It attracted much attention with surprisingly easy victories in the Winter Relay Carnival and in the Class B championships, and later in the outdoor season came through with a surprise triumph in City High Schools' Meet.

COACHES

MARY McKAY

Devoting her unflagging efforts to stimulating wider interest in athletics, Mary F. McKay has been instrumental in the development of the remarkably successful girls' sports program.

ALFRED MORRO

As a canny strategic and a forceful exponent of aggressive sportsmanship, Alfred V. Morro has consistently applied winning formulae to the feats of his football and track teams.

JOHN SHARKEY

The acquisition of John J. Sharkey's adept services as fencing coach has effected both a vast improvement in the caliber of play and a greater appreciation of the finer points of fencing.

ANGUS THOMPSON

A keen student of the intricacies of basketball strategy, Angus L. Thompson has moulded well-balanced and soundly drilled teams from a characteristically restricted supply of talent.

ATHLETE-SCHOLAR AWARD

Instituted as a tribute to the athlete who also excels in his scholastic pursuits, the first annual scholar-athlete award was bestowed upon David Bender in ceremonies at the Varsity Club dinner. In the picture to the left Bender is seen receiving the trophy symbolic of proficiency in athletics and scholarship.

Reception of this honor is but one of an impressive array of achievements on the part of Mr. Bender. Ranked seventh scholastically in his class, he has been awarded letters in cross-country, indoor and outdoor track for three years. Editor of the REVIEW and the recipient of the Harvard prize book, Bender also qualified for the highly selective National Merit Scholarship Program.

PURPLE KNOCKS WOONSOCKET

Fleet-footed guard Al Pellini and elusive halfback Nazar Nazarian, co-captains of the 1956 football team, demonstrate their skills.

Classical met with victory in its first encounter of the season as it defeated Woonsocket by a score of 19-13. This game was featured by some fine backfield and line play, with Nazar Nazarian, Ted McLaughlin, Bob Moran, and Al Pellini all rendering outstanding performances. Other victories were reaped at the ex-

HOOPSTERS RAP

Aggressive rebounding, deadly shooting, and all-around hustle featured this year's home-and-home series with Scituate High School as the Pond Street forces vanquished the hapless Spartans by convincing 62-48 and 67-44 scores. Employing a deliberate offense and an air-tight zone defense, Classical completely dominated the play in both contests.

The Purple's twin victories over Scituate provided what little solace could be had from an otherwise disappointing season. Inexperience, losses through ineligibility and mid-year graduation, and inability to Seasonal scoring honors went to Tom McKechnie (142) and Ed Iannuccilli (99). Captain John Rampone, Joe Galouski, and John Pliakas handled backcourt assignments, while Pete McCabe and Gene Parker did the bulk of the rebounding. Whizkids Bob Aneyci and Dick Sylvestri were conspicuous for their spirited hustle and spectacular scoring sallies.

CLASSICAL PREVAILS

For the eighteenth time in the past nineteen years, Classical's track team won the annual winter Relay Carnival. This year the Morromen proved to be true champions by prevailing in this meet for the first time in competition with strong Class A teams. Although the Purple won only two events, depth in the running events enabled Classical to be victorious.

Classical also showed well in triangular and dual meets during the season and finished a strong second in the City Meet. The trackmen romped over Barrington and Cranston in dual meets and also triumphed in a triangular meet with Central and Barrington. One of the highlights of the indoor track season was Al Torgan's victory in the Brown University Interscholastic Track Meet. Torgan won the shot put with a fine heave of 53 feet.

The 1957 team, consisting mostly of juniors and seniors, was led by such outstanding athletes as Torgan, Jim Prata, and Carl Fleigner in the field events, and in the running events

With many promising sophomores and juniors returning next year, Classical's track team, with the fine coaching of Mr. Morro, will undoubtedly enjoy another successful season.

HARRIERS BEST IN RECENT YEARS

The Classical Cross Country team began its season with a very impressive showing in the Columbus Day Road Race. Led by Dick Petitpas, who finished twelfth, the harriers placed fourth among seventeen teams participating in the race. Other Classical scorers were Dick Bernstein, a surprising Sophomore, Jack Lafferty, Wayne Nordquist and Dave Bender.

This year's team, one of Classical's strongest in recent years, placed high in competition all season. The services of veterans Petitpas, Lafferty and Nordquist were supplemented by Bender, Bernstein, Steve Newman, Ken Harris, Guy Lombardo and Dick Tougas. With Lombard, Bernstein and Tougas returning next year, Classical can look forward to another fine season.

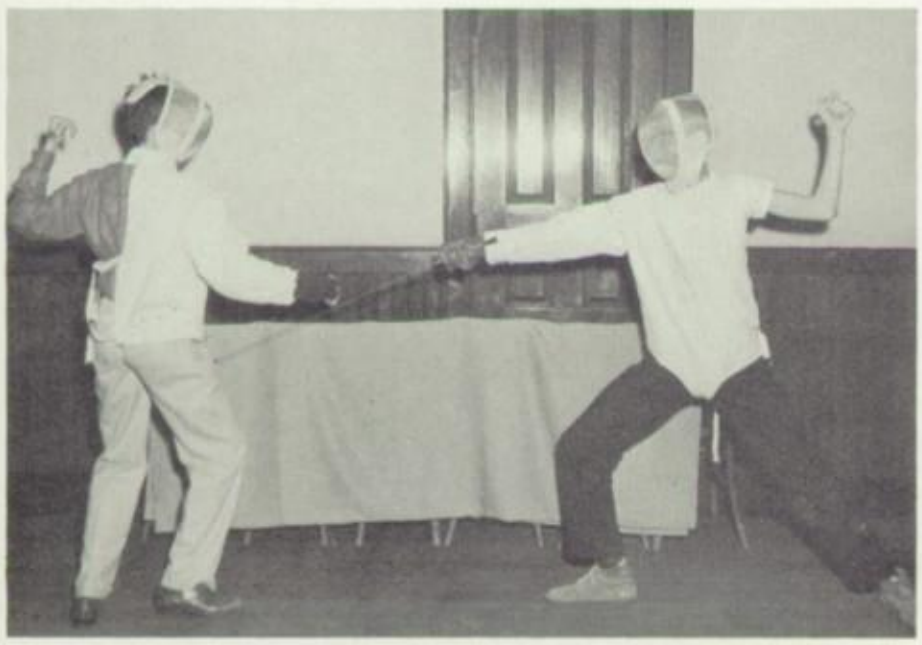
CLASSICAL FOILSMEN COP SECOND PLACE



Foul! Doug Gregory (right) misses the scoring area in a contest with Ed Blankstein.

Clutch performances proved the key to Classical fencing successes as the Pond Street squad bagged second place in the Providence City High Schools' fencing league. Winning many contests by narrow margins, the Purple wave finished one game off the pace set by Mount Pleasant, and only an early season loss to Hope spelled the difference between a first and second place finish.

Classical foilsmen exhibited a flair for the dramatic by scoring a stunning upset over heavily favored Mount Pleasant in the league finale. Individual victories by Carl Battaglia, Norman Waksler, and Bill Bornett paved the way for an unexpected rout by the home forces. In other seasonal encounters consistent playing by Doug Gregory, Alan Zenofsky and Howie Zissernon contributed valuably to the Classical Cause.

NETMEN FINISH HIGH IN LEAGUE PLAY

Faced with the inevitable problem of rebuilding, after losing to graduation several members of a championship team, the Classical High tennis contingent, nevertheless, compiled a respectable 3-5-1 record for the duration of league play. Stirring victories were scored over Pawtucket West, Warwick, and Cranston, while the contest with Rogers ended in a 3-3 deadlock. Unfortunately Classical fell victim to the blistering attacks of such formidable foes as Hope, De LaSalle, East Providence, and archrival La Salle.

An impressive array of talent introduces an auspicious note into the predictions for the 1957 season. The services of veterans Jeff Alprin and Captain Pete McCabe, ably supplemented by those of Charlie Bradner, Jerry Fogarty, Charlie Mandell, Ken Blackman, and Lum Gasbarro, offer promise of a successful campaign.

With all four players turning in low score cards the Classical golf team capped a successful season with double wins over South Kingston High School. Rod Brusini set a torrid pace in both engagements as the Purple's hefty driving and flawless putting proved the opponent's undoing.

In other league encounters West Warwick, Cranston, and Mount Pleasant felt the sting of defeat by a sophomore-studded Classical squad. Dick Cappalli, Charlie Lord, and "Easy" Ed Riley were largely responsible for a creditable third place finish.

Barring the unforseen Classical should come home at the head of the field in the forthcoming campaign. A veteran squad strengthened by the addition of Harry Owen and Jerry Pease augurs well for Mr. Fisher's linksmen.

CLASSICAL GAINS LEAGUE STATUS

Baseball has at last assumed its long deserved position of prominence in the Classical athletic program as a result of a decision by league officials to readmit the Purple to interscholastic competition after 7 years' absence. The return to league status affords an opportunity to extend a strong baseball tradition established during the heyday of Classical's diamond fortunes.

Though armed with the incentive to maintain this reputation, Coach Frank Bellino has his work cut out. Around a nucleus of five veterans he must fashion from unproven candidates a team capable of competing on a level with strong, experienced Central Division clubs. The results should prove interesting.

Whether in victory or defeat, rain, or shine, the cheerleaders gave the boys of the basketball and football teams a big boost in morale. Athletes and spectators salute Classical's spirited twelve.

The aquatic-minded girls of Classical welcome the opportunity to participate in weekly swimming sessions held at the new Y. W. C. A. For one hour the girls thoroughly enjoy themselves learning life-saving methods, experimenting with new swimming strokes, and practicing graceful dives from the high board. This year, two successful swimming sessions, one in the fall and one in the spring, were held.

With 350 students and alumni in attendance the affair proved to be a big success, and the presence of such dignitaries as Senators Theodore Francis Green and John O. Highlight of the festivities was the designation of Senator Pastore as the outstanding Classical alumnus of 1956. In a brief acceptance speech the Senator mentioned the prominent place of

TO THE ENTERING FRESHMEN

You have just completed your first year in Classical High School and you have become aware of the earnest study and hard work required to attain success in this school. The members of the faculty, with their experience and knowledge, give you sincere and effective guidance to aid you in your individual endeavors.

Your fellow students have one common objective, to work diligently so that they may gain admission to an institution of higher learning. You have come to Classical to undertake a course of study that in addition to your extra-curricular activities will help you to develop your mental and physical abilities.

When you have completed your formative and memorable years within these time-honored walls you will have gained the benefits of Classical — a classical education; and in the future, when you have assumed your position in the highly competitive society of today, you will discover that the training at Classical will contribute greatly to your success.

Charles J. Ashworth, Jr.
Co-Editor

Classical High School — a challenge.

(l-r) William Boffi, Sandra Dickens, Diana Dalton, Melvin Baker, Karen Beaton.

JANUARY 1958

SEATED: Ardys Guenther, President.

STANDING: Gail Macdonald, Social Committee Co-Chairman; Ira Shoolman, Social Committee Co-Chairman; Carolyn Mondshein, Secretary; Steven Yarlas, Treasurer.

JUNE 1958

FIRST ROW: Judy Halpern, Secretary; Eugene Gasbarro, President; Judy Rosen, Social Committee Co-Chairman.

SECOND ROW: Ronald DelSesto, Social Committee Co-Chairman; Joseph Pezzullo, Treasurer; Carl Battaglia, Vice-President.

Three successful years have been completed by the Junior Class, and we are now anxiously awaiting our fourth year. We have made quite a name for ourselves, contributing two cheerleaders, Judy Halpern and Judy Kolb, numerous athletes such as Carl Fleigner, Harvey Levin, Herbie Katz, Al Brierley, and others; and we certainly cannot forget to mention the members of our class who participate in REVIEW and CADUCEUS activities. With the start of the A Cappella choir, we sent a large number of students to represent us, and the Glee Club also has several of our girls.

Our social events have all been successful, starting with our first dance, The Freshman Frolic, at which all had an enjoyable evening. The dance sponsored by the Junior Class this year proved very rewarding, and no one could forget our first formal dance, The Junior Prom. With growing anticipation we are all awaiting that night of nights — The Senior Prom, the last, and probably the biggest, dance of our stay at Classical.

With this spirited attitude, the Junior Class ought to leave with Classical a name to remember, and certainly a name of which to be proud.

UNDERGRADUATE EXECUTIVES–HISTORIES

JUNE 1959

FRONT to BACK: Gilbert Indeglia, President; Gerald Fogarty, Vice-President; Joyce Samdperil, Secretary; Charles Mandell, Social Committee Chairman; Donald Goldsmith, Treasurer.

Now that we are officially upperclassmen, we can look back smilingly on the trials and tribulations of our first two years as Classicalites. Most of the hectic freshman year was spent getting adjusted. Newly-elected class officers Gilbert Indeglia, Gerald Fogarty, Joyce Samdperil, and Donny Goldsmith planned the successful Freshman Frolic, at which Libby Gross was crowned queen. A class party at Crescent Park ended the year happily.

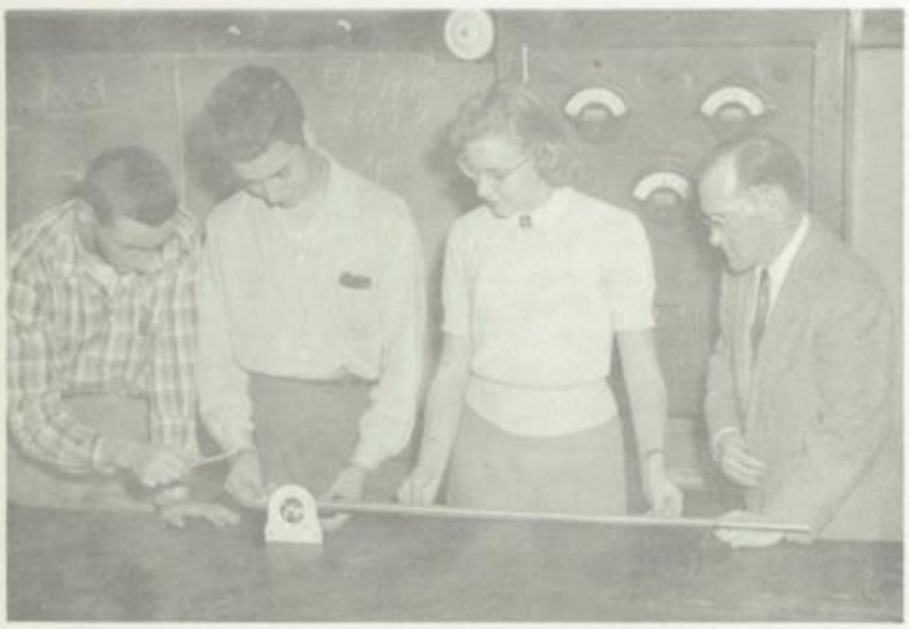
This year many boys, including John Janas, Bob Simmons, Paul Waldman, and Mike Spizziri, entered wholeheartedly into Classical's sports program, cheered on by Cathie Kiene, Merlyn Davies, and Joyce Samdperil, our new cheerleaders. Most of the girls are also well on their way to earning major letters. With so many outstanding scholars and athletes, the class of 1959 is destined to set many records.

AROUND & ABOUT C. H. S. . . .

"Veni, vidi, vici": Ken Harris recites to Miss Sears in Latin class.

"Sprechen Sie Deutsch?" Miss Hempel instructs the German class.

Quest for knowledge: Joe Carneglia consults with Miss Spizzirri in the library.



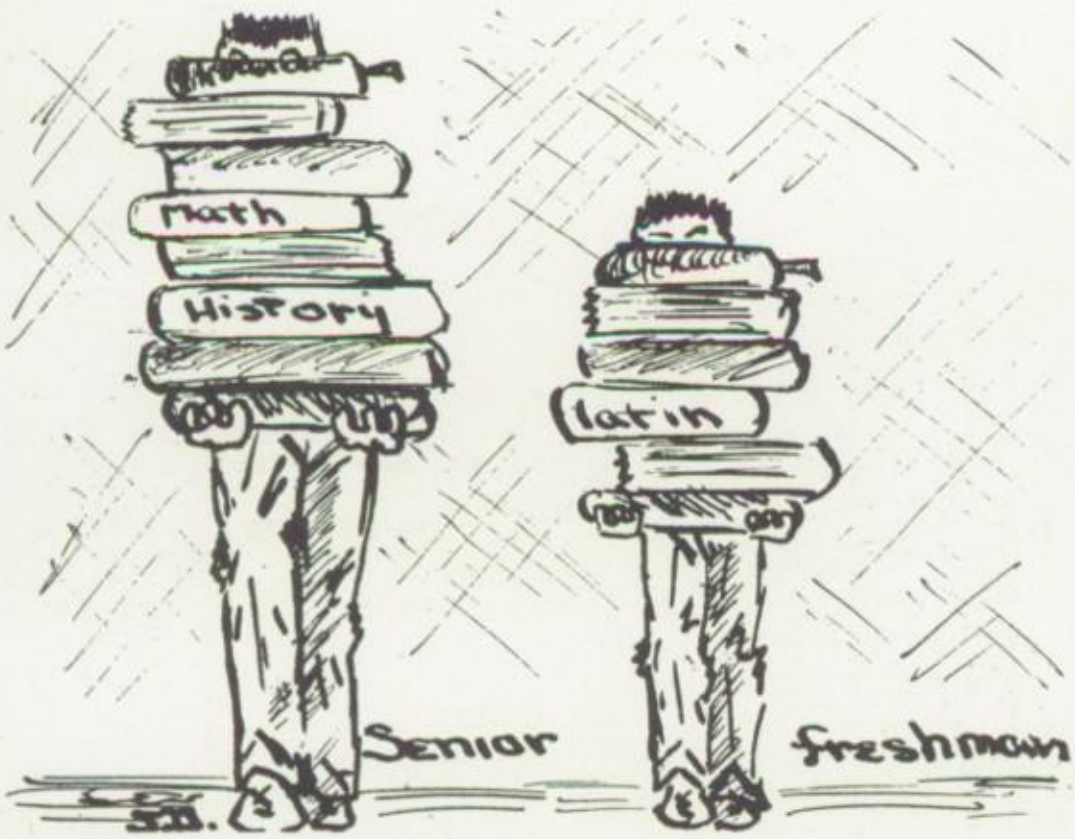
On the threshold of scientific discovery: Dave Bender, Ron DiPippo, Hope Hersey, and Mr. Lafferty.

Eyes on the world: Miss McInnis discusses the Middle East situation with her history class.

. . . CLASS TIME

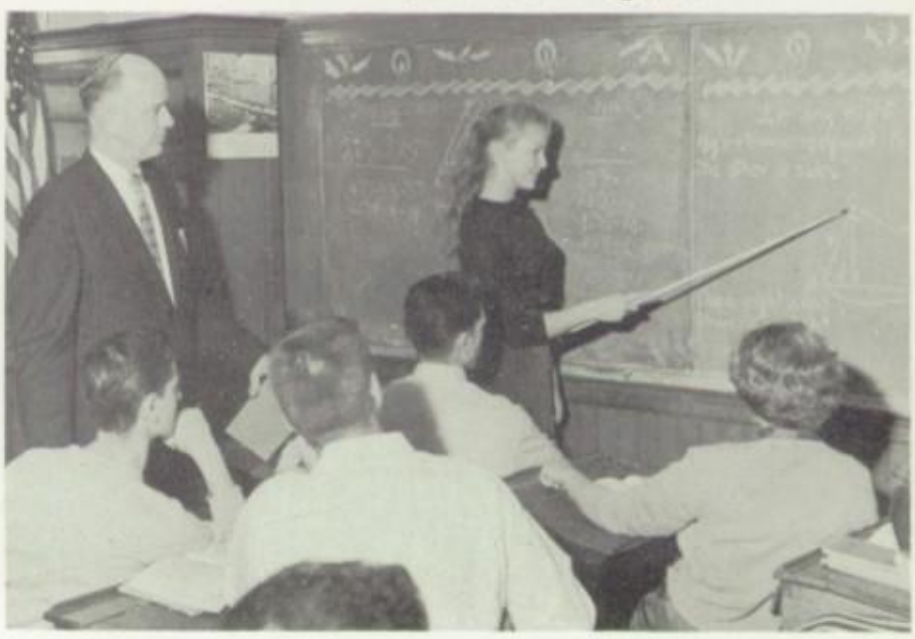
Parallel postulate: Mr. Huling listens to Joan Greenstein's recitation.

Creating beauty: M. Piscone, Miss Shurtluff, and C. Wheelock.



"To be or not to be": Mr. Leonard exposes his class to a little bit of Shakespeare.

Woweeee! I got a hundred! Judy Darling and Carol Bernier.



Proving the impossible: Mr. McGlinchy studies Ardys Guenther's reasoning.

SHOPPING FOR A JOB?

CHECK WHAT YOU WANT:

☐ Good starting salary with regular raises

☐ Pleasant work with other girls and young men

☐ Prestige of a responsible job with a well-known and respected company

If your list shows three checks, then you should check into what the Telephone Company has to offer you. Smart girls are doing it now, before they graduate from high school. Come in and see our employment interviewer soon. You'll enjoy talking with her.

Act now, and you can say with pride, "I'm all set! I'm going to work with the Telephone Company!"

See the Guidance Counselor at your school, and talk first with her about when and where to apply.

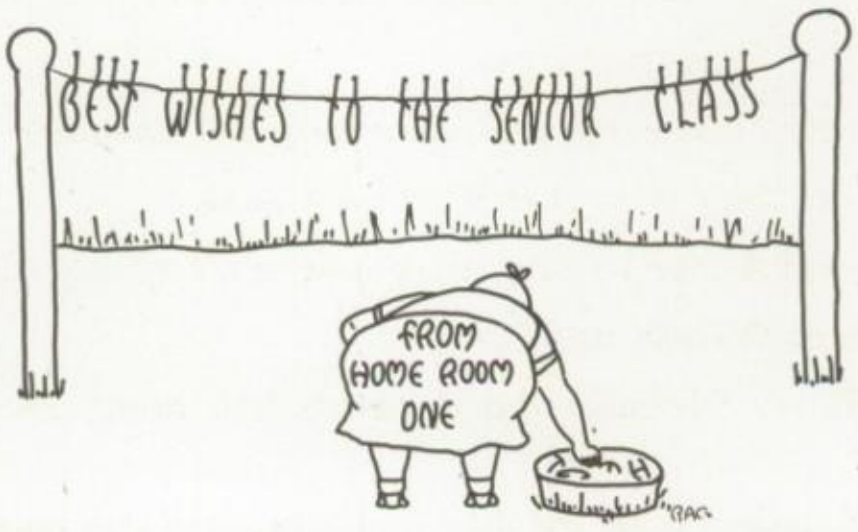
The Class of 1957 thanks its advertisers, whose personal interest and financial aid have been necessary for the compilation of this book.

The editors also express their sincere appreciation and gratitude to all committee members for their work, interest, and effort in preparing the 1957 CADUCEUS.

—THE CADUCEUS BOARD



OUR THANKS TO...

The faculty who gave much of their valuable time.

Mr. Walter Andersen and Miss Elizabeth MacDonald, our advisers, for their excellent guidance, assistance, and supervision.

Mr. A. Forest Ranger for having managed our financial affairs.

Miss Dorothy Shurtleff, who instructed us in the use of art.

Judy Darling, who designed the cover.

Robert DiBiasio for his wonderful photography and unending patience.

Roberts Studio for their prompt and efficient service.

Shirley Seiden and Arthur Tuch for their invaluable typing assistance.

Mr. Jack Brown of O'Toole and Sons.

Dr. and Mrs. Harry Dimond, who donated their house as the Caduceus Workshop.

The faculty and student body for their assistance and co-operation. In short, all who have helped to make this job easier and more enjoyable.

Behind The Scenes At Classical High

Always on the job are Classical's janitors: Mr. Vincent Perrillo and Mr. Bohdian Pomoransky.

School cooks (l. to r.): Mrs. Jamison, Mrs. Barganian, Mrs. Robinson, and Mrs. Collella prepare hot lunches for students.

Mrs. DiSchullio and Miss Christie help out in the kitchen after lunch.

Cynthia Skalski and Mrs. Barganian give hungry boys speedy service at lunch.
